The use of our service requires a customer to have a cell phone or access to the Internet. Access to the customer's account requires a username and a password. In creating the account, the customer has to enter a "Secret Question" and a "Secret Answer," which will be used to verify them when they want to retrieve a forgotten password. For further verification, the customer is asked by the company to provide certain information in the account, such as names, phone numbers, email address, date of last use, etc. We do not provide the password to those who can not verify the account and to those who we know are not the owners of the account. The password is not given over the phone. We inform the customer that it is going to be sent via SMS to the customer's registered cell phone number (if there is no cell phone number, it is sent via email to the customer's registered email address).

The company does not forward any customer information to any third-party individuals/companies nor does it use the information for any sales or marketing campaigns.

Access to the customer's account is available to the company's customer service representative. The representative accesses the customer's account only when they ask for help or have questions and that the representative has informed the customer that she will need to go in his/her account. The information available to the representative are the same information that the customers see in their account should they access it themselves. The more sensitive information (past messages, credit-loading history, and other technical information) are accessible only by the company's chief technical officer.
